The necessary social changes ~~in that~~ you wish to see in India in the next few decades : _____ x _____

At the midnight stroke of 14th August 1947, Pt. Jawahar Lal Nehru delivered his famous 'Tryst with destiny' speech in the Parliament of India.

That famous speech by Pt. Nehru was not only a simple ceremonial speech, but it was a Vision for a newly independent Country. More than 70 years have passed since that historic moment.

70 years down the line, India has achieved a lot as a nation. ~~Even~~ the fear of Balkanisation, is no more, and India is no more a country dependent on other countries for its food supply.

Now, India is a net exporter of food grains. It has a vibrant democracy and thriving economy, currently 6th largest in terms of nominal GDP. But, all these achievements doesn't mean that we are on right track in each and every field. In fact, India is performing below par in certain areas, and, one such area is that of social changes.

Social change is a perpetual phenomena, and no society can prevent itself from change. Even in the Middle Val period of India, when social changes were almost stagnant, India witnessed social changes.

Similarly, in Modern India it had social reformers like Raja Ram Mohan Roy, Ishwar Chandra Vidya Sagar, Jyotiba Phule, B. R.
Ambedkar etc who brought immense change in Indian society like abolition of Sati, Widow remarriage and upliftment of untouchables.

Despite all these, we are still struggling with certain social issues. Today, when we are reclaiming ourselves as a nation, we must get rid of these social evils. The first and foremost of these evils is caste system.

Caste system has its roots in ancient India, when division of labour was based on birth rather than on skills and merits. This evil has caused immense damage to us as a nation and as a society. This system can not have a place in a civilized society. And as a civilized society we must aspire to get away with it. Dr. B.R. Ambedkar had also suggested a remedy for this evil.

"The Best remedy of Caste system is Inter-caste marriage"

The ~~world~~ word 'marriage' automatically brings to our mind the presence of two beings - a man and a woman. Both man and woman constitute almost 50% each of the total population of world as well as India. However, women have not got their due share and there is lot of gender inequality present in India as well as world. The extent of inequality is clearly evident from the following statement of Hillary Clinton

"Women are the most untapped resource of the world"

Women are equal partners in building a nation, and we as a nation, must aspire to give women their due share. This is not just about giving women what they deserve, but also about development of a nation. Mr. Ban Ki Moon very aptly said that

"Gender equality is not only about women. It is about poverty, hunger and sustainable development"

Providing women their due share will increase inclusiveness. But, this much amount of inclusiveness is not enough. India is a highly diverse country. It has diversity in form of religion, language, food habits, dressing sense, ethnicity, etc. To hold together strongly, a country of diversity of this magnitude, must have value of inclusiveness. "Vasudheva Kutumbakam" i.e. "Entire earth is my family" is central to Indian philosophy. ~~This~~ Inclusiveness is implicit in it. However, for the last few years India has witnessed some increase in Extremism, Religious orthodoxy, Bigotry, Regionalism etc.

Though, these things are few in no. considering a country as big and as diverse as India. Yet, we should desire to get rid of these blots and form a India which is truly inclusive - inclusive in all forms, and inclusive for everyone. We can not afford to hand over to our child future generations, our children a divided and splintered society.

children should get a future which is inclusive. But, what about their present? Considering present situation, child labour is another blot on us as a society. We can not expect a good future for a country, if the children of the country are engaged in works in industry, in farms, and other such activities, rather than being in schools. We want our country to have children like Malala Yusoffzai and not like Obama-bin-laden and Burhaan Wani.

Another issue which our children, especially girls face is trafficking. Child trafficking is a real concern for us. These trafficked children are sent to different-2 countries, where they face inhumane treatment and even sexual exploitation. India has a bad reputation of being the country with one of the highest numbers of child trafficking. This is also hurting our reputation in Community of nations. Therefore, this is one such thing, which we all should aspire to stop.

Children are the future of country, and the quality of future depends a lot on present. I would want my country and countrymen to have scientific temperament. The importance of scientific temperament can be understood from the fact that, we have a provision in fundamental duties part of the Constitution, which talks about scientific temperament. Even the first PM of India, Pt. Jawahar Lal Nehru was very much inclined towards developing scientific temperament. But, even after 70 years of Independence, we often come across news like witch-hunting and Tantrism. All these are very much due to lack of scientific temperament. In fact, by developing scientific temperament in the people, we can automatically get rid of ~~the~~ most of the social evils!

A well functioning society Apart from scientific temperament, a well functioning society also needs emotional intelligence. I would wish my country to have people who are logical yet emotional. I would like to see people who respect elderly citizens, respect family Values, respect for culture, Patriotic and law abiding.

As, India is a developing economy, which is all set to become 3rd largest in terms of nominal GDP, I would like Indian society to change their attitude. I would like them to be very hard working, optimistic, aware and informed.

Though, Indians are considered to be hard working people, optimist and informed people, yet, I would aspire to see Indians utilising their maximum potential.

Another issue Indian Society faces is of Corruption. I would love to see India as a corruption free country.

Though practically 'Corruption free' ^{states} ↑ is something almost impossible to achieve, as corruption is a very vague term. Yet, I would like India to be corruption free atleast in general sense like getting the things done without bribe, absence of nepotism etc.

Be it corruption, nepotism or any other social issue, eradication depends a lot on political will power. Recent Act by parliament regarding abolition of Triple Talaq is one such example. However, Indian Politics has seen a ~~at~~ high degree of degradation, especially in terms of principals and virtues and Ethics. Recent cases in various states regarding horse-trading of legislatures is ~~one~~ such manifestation of this. In coming decades, I would like Indian Politics to be driven by principals India has lot of issues and social problems. But, this is not something very uncommon. Every country and every society has its own social problems. But, with out looking at the flaws of others, we should work consistently to develop an India, as per the aspirations of founding fathers of India. we should aspire for an India where,

"The head can be held high"
