- (b) Machines were introduced in the Indian textile industry in large numbers.
- (c) Railway lines were laid in many parts of the country.
- (d) Heavy duties were imposed on the imports of British manufactures.

Answer: (a)

Explanation:

- ❑ The Industrial Revolution brought severe consequences to the Indian society. One of the most important consequences of British rule was the decline and destruction of urban and rural handicraft industries.
- ❑ The discovery of steam power and its practice from the year 1815 created a threat to the Indian textile industry. The inventions of the spinning mule and power loom became more and more efficient because of steam power. Consequently, it had greatly reduced the cost of British textile and made it internationally competitive.
- ❑ To support British textile industry, heavy duties were imposed on the export of Indian textiles. Indian farmers were forced to produce cotton so that it can fuel English factories.
- ❑ However, there were some positive effects of the Industrial Revolution also. For example:
 - The introduction of factories and assembly lines;
 - Electricity development;
 - Railroads (First Railway in India: from Bombay to Thane in 1853).
- ❑ All these things contributed to faster and more efficient production of goods and materials. But, these developments took place mainly in the second half of the 19th century.

Therefore, option (a) is the correct answer.

- ❑ It was an agreement between the East India Company and landlords (zamindars) to fix the revenue collection. These landlords or zamindars were recognized as the owners of the land with hereditary rights.
- ❑ The revenue was collected by zamindars from the natives. This created a gulf between the zamindars and the natives and created a class loyal to Britishers.
- ❑ Under this settlement, the zamindar had to pay 10/11th portion of the revenue to the British and could keep 1/10th portion to himself. Though zamindars were loyal to British, not every zamindar got the benefit of this settlement.
