Green Nudges

- A study conducted in China has shed light on the positive environmental impact of implementing "green nudges" in online food delivery platforms.
- Green nudges are interventions that encourage people to act more sustainably. They are a relatively new policy tool that aims to encourage pro-environmental behaviour.
 - By defaulting to "no disposable cutlery" and rewarding customers with "green points," this simple change led to a 648% increase in no-cutlery orders, offering potential benefits for both the environment and consumer behaviour.
 - The study estimated that over 18 months in Shanghai, more than 225.33 million sets of single-use cutlery (SUCs) were reduced, potentially preventing 4,506.52 metric tonnes of waste and saving 56,333 trees.
- India's leading online food delivery platform, Zomato, introduced similar nudges, leading to a substantial reduction in cutlery waste.
