For Mains: Hate Speech, Causes of Communal Violence in India

Communal violence is a form of collective violence that involves clashes between groups belonging to different religious, ethnic, linguistic, or regional identities.

In India, communal violence is often associated with Hindu-Muslim conflicts, but it can also involve other groups such as Sikhs, Christians, Buddhists, Dalits, and tribals.

The Indian Penal Code (IPC) defines communal violence as any act that promotes enmity between different groups on grounds of religion, race, place of birth, residence, language, etc., and does acts prejudicial to maintenance of harmony.

Communal violence has a long history in India, dating back to the pre-colonial and colonial periods. Communal violence has continued to plague India in the post-independence era. Some of the major incidents which had communal overtones include the Moplah rebellion of 1921, the Noakhali riots of 1946, the Partition riots of 1947, the Babri Masjid demolition of 1992, and most recently Manipur violence and Nuh violence.

Communal violence is often triggered by political, social, economic, or cultural factors, such as elections, religious festivals, cow protection, conversions, inter-faith marriages, land disputes, migration, media propaganda, hate speech, etc.

Communal violence has serious implications for India's democracy, secularism, human rights, social harmony, national security, and development.
