Why in News?

The recent release of a film depicting the life of freedom fighter Usha Mehta resurfaces the importance of her historical contribution and sacrifice during the Quit India Movement.

What was the Role of Usha Mehta in Quit India Movement (QIM)?

- About QIM:
 - Commencing on 8th August 1942, marked by Mahatma Gandhi's iconic speech with slogan Do or Die. The QIM symbolises mass civil disobedience, nationwide protests, and the establishment of parallel governance structures.
 - British authorities responded with mass arrests, detaining prominent leaders including Gandhi, Nehru, and Patel, thereby drastically reducing the movement's intensity.
- About Usha Mehta:
 - Usha Mehta, then a 22-year-old law student, was galvanised by Gandhi's ideology, prompting her to forsake her studies and actively participate in the movement.
 - Recognising the efficacy of propagating information, Mehta conceived the notion of Congress Radio as a secretive means of communication.
- Establishment of Congress Radio:
 - Facing the challenges of funding and technical expertise, Mehta, alongside associates such as Nariman Printer, endeavoured to establish Congress Radio.
 - Despite regulatory restrictions imposed by British authorities, the Printer's adeptness facilitated the creation of a functional transmitter, enabling Congress Radio's inaugural broadcast on 3rd September 1942.
- Catalysing Independence Through Broadcasts:
 - Congress Radio swiftly emerged as a preeminent source of news for Indians, circumventing colonial censorship and disseminating crucial information regarding the movement's progress.
 - Beyond news broadcasting, the station aired political speeches and ideological messages, strengthening the people's dedication to gaining independence.
- Legal Consequences and Mehta's Legacy:
 - The secretive operations of Congress Radio ultimately attracted the attention of British authorities, leading to the arrest and subsequent trial of Mehta and her associates.
 - Mehta, revered as "Radio-ben" for her pioneering efforts, continued to follow Gandhian principles post-independence, garnering national recognition, including the Padma Vibhushan in 1998.
